MOVIES THAT DISTURB OUR PEACE

Actually, there are lots of films that fall into the category of disturbing, but I have a particular one in mind. The movie is entitled Spotlight and it opens this weekend. The title refers to the name of a team of journalists at the Boston Globe who, in 2002, began publishing investigative articles exposing alleged acts of sexual abuse by certain priests and a subsequent cover-up by church authorities. These pieces appeared daily for several months and eventually led to the resignation of Cardinal Bernard Law, the city's Archbishop. These revelations shook the foundations of the church and led a great many Catholics to question their faith, or at least their connection with the church. This all happened while the whole country looked on via various media outlets and the internet.

I happened to be visiting my family in Boston the very week that this news broke. It was excruciatingly painful and humiliating to learn that people in my profession had committed these terrible crimes. I felt bad for the victims and the priests because I believe in redemption and forgiveness, even when the latter is not easily come by. I never felt badly about the beating that Cardinal Law and other bishops took from the media. They claimed they were trying to "protect the church" when, in fact, they brought all of us great harm. As it turns out, the Spotlight team and other journalists around the country did eventually bring about change in forcing the leaders to do what they should have been doing all along, setting in place ironclad policies that would provide a safe environment for children and other vulnerable individuals.

It's hard to overlook, however, that the media painted all clergy with the same brush. Though the statistics show that 4% of priests were guilty of these heinous offenses, their stories made it appear the number was much larger. This brings me back to the Spotlight movie. Priests and the church in general are going to be portrayed in a very negative light. Lots of Catholics who suffered through those events when they first happened are going to have the scabs torn off. It will not be pretty. I'm not sure I can handle that myself. Anyway, I'm just giving you a heads up.

How can I help?

NATIONAL BIBLE WEEK
November 15th -21st

"THE WORD OF GOD IS LIVING AND EFFECTIVE"

This celebration is being held as we celebrate the 50th Anniversary of the publication of the Second Vatican Council document known as Verbum Dei (The Word of God). Since that time Catholics have entered upon a golden age of looking to God's Word for guidance and direction.

WAYS TO CELEBRATE!

- † Bibles come in many different forms and translations. Search a book store or amazon.com for a good Catholic bible that you will actually read.
- † Read the articles in the next 2 bulletins
- † Download the YouVerse application on to your tablet or smart phone. It offers dozens of reading plans.
- † Take a few moments each day to read God's Word.
- † Order At Home with The Word and read the scripture passages for the upcoming Sunday or holyday.

The more deeply the Word is rooted in the home, the more entire families can grow in relationship to Christ and to one another.
